

Safety Redefined:

Transforming a
Liner Pool in a
Secluded Walled
Garden

We recently completed the renovation of a classic 6m liner pool with Roman end steps, situated in a secluded walled garden within a stunning Cotswold stone period property.

The project involved upgrading all pool fittings, replacing the old liner with a durable new one, installing a walkable safety cover, replacing the terrace, and upgrading the coping stones. The renovation not only enhanced the pool's safety and functionality but also addressed maintenance challenges caused by overhanging trees in the garden.

The Brief

The client's beautiful Roman end pool, located in a peaceful walled garden, had aged gracefully but needed updates. The original 0.75mm liner was worn and needed replacing, along with weathered coping stones, and an ageing terrace. The client wanted to improve safety for their children and pets while making pool maintenance easier, as overhanging trees constantly dropped debris into the pool.

Challenges

The main challenge was to integrate modern safety upgrades with the pool's traditional Roman end design while enhancing its functionality. The new liner needed to provide long-lasting durability, and the coping stones and terrace had to be upgraded in a way that preserved the aesthetic harmony of the period property's secluded garden. The pool, with its sloping depth, also required thoughtful design to balance safety and ease of maintenance.

The Solution

To meet the client's needs, we began by upgrading all pool fittings and replacing the old 0.75mm liner with a new 1.5mm liner from Aquaflex, designed to last 25+ years. This provided the pool with a fresh look and ensured long-term durability.

Next, we installed a walkable safety cover, which not only prevents accidents but also protects the pool from falling debris, particularly important given the overhanging trees in the garden. The cover's sleek, modern design blends seamlessly into the space, keeping the pool clean and safe year-round with minimal effort.

We replaced the old coping stones with natural limestone coping, specially selected from Cranbourne Stone. These new coping stones feature a rounded edge to match the Roman end steps, providing both a timeless aesthetic and enhanced functionality.

The terrace was upgraded with slip-resistant paving to create a safer environment for family activities, while maintaining the natural charm of the walled garden. This practical yet elegant solution perfectly complements the overall look of the property, allowing the pool to continue offering versatility for both relaxation and exercise.
